□ Course Information

Course Description	Globalization, War, and the Economy explores international relations in the context of globalization. In this course, we ask the following questions: What is globalization and how does it affect the world? Does globalization increase or decrease international conflict? What is the effects of globalization on the economy? Do trade and increased international interactions help international peace and stability or do they make the world more vulnerable because of international interdependence? After completing this course, students will have a better understanding of the current world and the impact of globalization.
Course Evaluation	Midterm Exam 35% Final Exam 35% Research Paper and presentation 20% Class Participation and Attendance 10% Attendance is required. Students can have one unexcused absence. After that, each absence will result in one percent loss. Perfect attendance and active participation will be reflected in final grade.
Course Materials	Readings will be provided in PDF.
Research Paper Guidelines	The length requirement is 4-5 double spaced pages (Times New Roman with 12-point font size and 1-inch margin). You MUST have at least FIVE references. 1. You MUST have a clearly and narrowly defined question. I suggest you develop a research question in a literally question form. For instance, does globalization helps democratization in the world? 2. In the introduction, you introduce the research question and describe why the question is meaningful/interesting. At the beginning of the body, you provide background information. If it is a case study or analytical paper, you provide historical information so that the reader can understand the background. If it is a theoretical paper, you provide a literature review on the subject. 3. In the main body of the paper, you provide your answer to the research question. You MUST provide evidence to back up your argument/answer to the research question. 4. In the conclusion, you summarize what you did in the paper and discuss your findings in the context of the literature in the field and implications of your study.
Presentation of Research Paper	Students are required to present his/her paper to the class.
