Prerequisite Course
Course Objectives	The development of global trade and policy is of significance for business expansion and national economic growth. This is particularly important for South Korea, a global trading nation that has adopted an export-oriented policy and promotes the export of high-technology products and services in international markets. It is thus critical for business leaders and policy-makers to understand legal aspects of international transactions and global trade and investment regimes, particularly from ASEAN, EU and US perspectives. To this end, the course is designed for business, international studies and law students. It will provide an overview of legal issues that apply to the sale of goods transactions, the meanings and application of trade terms in the maritime industry, and methods of financing sales and of transporting goods across borders. Moreover, the course will discuss the resolution of commercial and investment disputes, and regulatory issues involving WTO principles, state-owned enterprises and anti-corruption laws. Cotemporary legal and political issues on the US-China trade war, the COVID-19 pandemic, mega-trade FTAs including the CPTPP and the RCEP, and FinTech will also be discussed. It is expected that students will examine international trade cases and problems from interdisciplinary angles, gain presentation and advice-giving experience and, more importantly, learn to utilize legal concepts to improve the decision-making process to manage transnational business and trade politics. Leading academics, lawyers and officials from governments and international organizations will be invited to share their insight with students. Note: this course will be taught online.
